

College of Design

Christoph Lindner, Dean

(541) 346-3631
105 Lawrence Hall

Founded in 1914, the College of Design is a collaborative community dedicated to environmental sustainability, civic responsibility, creativity and innovation, international understanding, and cross-disciplinary education. The college (formerly the School of Architecture and Allied Arts) has degree programs in Eugene and Portland. Its goal is to provide students with the skills and mentorship needed to tackle complex global challenges in the 21st century.

The college is composed of three schools and one independent department:

- School of Architecture and Environment
- School of Art and Design
- School of Planning, Public Policy and Management
- Department of the History of Art and Architecture

Programs

Undergraduate students may major in architecture; art (including nine media areas); art history; interior architecture; landscape architecture; planning, public policy and management; and product design. In addition, the college offers minors in architecture, art, art history, historic preservation, interior architecture, landscape architecture, multimedia, nonprofit administration, and planning, public policy and management.

Graduate programs offered include architecture, art, art history, historic preservation, interior architecture, landscape architecture, nonprofit management, public administration, sports product design, among others.

In addition, the college offers advanced study opportunities in architecture, historic preservation, product design, and sports product design at the University of Oregon in Portland, located at the historic White Stag Block. Research initiatives in urban design, housing, historic preservation, energy studies, and design are led by faculty members in partnership with area professionals, governmental leaders, and nonprofit agencies.

Admission

Admission to the major or the minor, degree requirements, and course offerings are described in the department sections. Freshman and transfer students must meet University of Oregon requirements for admission to College of Design departments and programs. Work submitted for transfer credit must be approved by the major department. Please note that some majors have several application cycles a year and some invite current students to apply to the major on a rolling admission cycle.

Student Services

The Student Services office aids students in College of Design disciplines as they endeavor to develop career goals and job-search strategies. The office collaborates with both administrative and academic units to provide comprehensive career services including vocational counseling, professional mentoring, group presentations, workshops, job fairs, and an annual career symposium.

Technology and Facilities

Students in the College of Design learn to explore new ideas through a combination of traditional methods and experimental techniques. The college provides access to a full array of computing applications through its instructional and research laboratories located in Eugene and Portland. A technical staff maintains these resources as well as shared large-scale color plotters and high-resolution printers. Technical support is available through Information Services, College of Design Technology Services, and informal peer consulting. Lecture rooms, studios, classrooms, and review rooms are networked (wired and wireless) to support instructional technology on Windows and Macintosh operating system workstations. The university provides server accounts for e-mail and web pages and maintains a high-speed computer network.

Facilities include classrooms, studio spaces, laboratories, workshops, galleries, a branch of UO Libraries, and the Urban Farm.

Research, Scholarship, and Creative Work

Faculty members in the environmental design and planning fields are active in professional practices, design competitions, and theoretical studies. Faculty members in the arts participate nationally and internationally in exhibitions of their creative work. Scholarly work in art history, planning, and public administration has produced significant publications and enhanced human understanding in those fields.

The College of Design faculty participates in many of the university's interdisciplinary research centers, institutes, and initiatives including the Sustainable Cities Initiative, the Center for Latino and Latin American Studies, the Community Service Center, and the Institute for a Sustainable Environment, among others.

The John Yeon Center for Architecture and the Landscape fosters research and appreciation of architecture, interior design, historic preservation, art, and landscape architecture by students, faculty members, professional architects, and designers. The program is responsible for the preservation of several significant historic and cultural properties designed by John Yeon through generous gifts. The Shire, a unique landscape designed by John Yeon, occupies a 75-acre waterfront site in Skamania County, Washington, in the heart of the scenic Columbia River Gorge, directly across from Multnomah Falls. It provides an educational site for the study of landscape preservation, design, ecology, and management that creates opportunities for individuals and study groups to engage in research and discussion of landscape architecture, planning, conservation, and preservation issues associated with the Columbia River Gorge, the Pacific Northwest region, and the nation.

Premajors and Nonmajors

Many courses are open to majors outside the College of Design or to students who have not yet declared a major. The college offers a range of general-education, group-satisfying courses as well as courses that satisfy multicultural requirements. In addition, students may access art and digital arts studio offerings as nonmajors, provided the appropriate course prerequisites have been completed. These courses include the following:
